Do You Have a Knack? ~ An Emory Original

Many things we do we have a knack in order for a good goal sometimes (you might say). You are building, most of the time it is a learning process. In time the the lack gets better my neighbor from years ago, Oron, when picking up hay for storage would make nice loads of hay. With others helping him pitching on ha up to him. One day Herold (Oron's son), maybe 16 years, was the one to load the hay. About the time he thought he had it loaded it all slid off. Oron said "Harold look you have a job loading the hay on again" I bet Harold started to get a knack in building a load of hay. So it would stay on the wagon on the way to the barn. Back in the earlier days the farmers cocked up the hay (little piles of hay in the field) after cutting it. It was a knack in making the cocks. If it remained the water would run off, these cocks could stay a few days (this made good quality feed). A lot of the curing was while in the cocks. Sometimes the barb did not hold all the hay. So they would make a hay stack outside - the hay would keep good if it was make right.

What about the house wife and her cooking and baking? They had a knack at it, they only had a wood cooking stove. All the other things she had to do. Things we hardly ever think about, like threading a needle.

I have seen guys that hardly coulee do anything, but that had the knack when it come to driving a semi tractor trailer and backing in a tiny spot. They could get within an inch. A knack comes from experience and doing it. We have the gift for that thing.

Think of any sport and the ones who rise to the top.
