It's the harvest time of the year! It's a nice time of the year. Pictured here is some of the harvest from Dede's garden.

Believe it or NOT!

Its been the way forever, why not know?

Maybe its the same reason why years ago we stopped the Red Man from the very same way.

On Labor Day I picked up a flint rock that had gotten uncovered by the rains. This rock was along the road that goes across my fields — The road that has been blocked.

A few years ago I often met up with a man that looked through my fields for arrow heads. He knew a lot about the Indian ways. He said that there had been a trail leading from the Folsom creek and the Red Man lived or had lived there and conducted their activities there. Some were in this area, it might be a lot of things left from those times. This is not the only thing that has been found in the area from the past.

The flint the Red Man used was brought in from another part of the country. When I find out more about the Red Man, I will print it.

Ross Mills Grange News Ross Grange Donates to Several Groups

Ross Grange met with Robert Goodwin presiding. The charter was draped in memory of Norman Sprague. The committee to write a resolution of respect is Betty Wakefield and Elaine Melquist.

A letter of thanks was received for the donation to the Children's Safety Village. Donations were voted to the Falconer Fire Department, Community Service project for State Grange in Oneonta, and to the New York State hosting fund for National Grange in Maine.

The annual report for Community Involvement has been sent for state competition. Information for the 2019 baking contest "Chocolate Jumbo Cookies" was distributed. Packets of scholarship applications for the Community Foundation Ross Grange Scholarships are ready for the committee to review.

A resolution of respect was read for John C. Cheney with a copy to be sent to the family.

Policies were made to clarify expenses paid for Ross members attending various New York State Grange events. Betty Wakefield and Opal Sprague will be voting delegates for the session in Oneonta in October.

The next meeting will be at the Falcon's Nest Banquet Hall with a tureen meal at 6:00 PM followed by the meeting.
